Block Island.

The hum of the spinning wheel is still a familiar sound on Block island, a quaint and interesting resort in summer and a miniature world in winter, in which the habits and customs are those of 150 years ago. The island is 15 miles of the most profound stillness. Then above E. O. Fretwell will ship a car of off the Rhode Island shore and almost

The isolation of the island is almost complete.

John Schofield established the first woolen mill in Connecticut near Oakdale, where the carding was done by power cards. In 1798 the Block islanders began to send wool to the mill to be carded into rolls, and generation after generation have kept up the practice. Hard on Mothers-in-law.

In the islands of New Britain a man must not speak to his mother-in-law. Not only is speech forbidden to this relative, but she must be avoided, and if by any chance the lady is met the sonin-law must hide himself or cover his face. Suicide of both parties is the outcome if the rule is broken. One of the English missionaries tried to get the natives' ideas of an oath, and he found tom. the most solemn asseveration among them was, "If I am not telling the truth, I hope I may touch the hand of my mother-in-law."-Pearson's Maga-

Julian Hawthorne is the son of Nathaniel Hawthorne. He was born in 1846, but he does not show his 50 years. When he was a boy of 7, some lady's remark on the fact that he was "weak chested" stung him, and he determined to make that comment impossible in the future. How well he succeeded is evidenced by the fact that while he was in college his chest measure was 48 inches, and it is well known that the late John C. Heenan, the pugilist, advised the young man to enter the prize

AN INJUSTICE.

Shortly after Mr. Boyd's return to West Point he missed sums of money brought of 25, though undoubtedly much older, as his appearance indicated. During wartime the extreme of age for admission there, which before and since was and is limited to 22 years, had been extended to 25. This was done in order to permit young men who had achieved distinction in real warfare the opportunity of acquiring a military education. So this man, named Casey, had entered at the acknowledged age of 25.

He was absolutely without money and belonged to an Irish family in humble circumstances, and his superior age and cunning unfitted Mr. Boyd to cope with him. Mr. Casey was compelled to procure mon-ey at all hazards. Before entering West Point he had married. That fact, if known, would have dismissed him at once from the academy, in accordance with the laws governing that institution, which permit no cadet to marry. In the academy at that time were several cadets, sons of very wealthy parents, who, contrary to West Point rules, kept in their rooms at barracks large sums of money. That was Casey's opportunity, for he had constant need of it with which to silence his wife, who had threatened his exposure.

So great was the confidence of the academy classmates in each other that the money was simply placed in a trunk, to which all the clique had access and used as a general fund. The government supplies cadets with all necessary articles, so that only luxuries need be purchased. developed into suspicions, and a plan was formed to mark some of the bills and thus discover the evildoer.

Mr. Boyd, by reason of his unpopularity, was unaware of those movements, and he had told no one of his own losses. The cadets had informed their immediate commandant that money was constantly being stolen in the corps. Aghast at such a lected a committee of eight-two from each company-to find and punish the thief. In an unguarded moment the commandant had said, "If you find the offender, you can deal with him as you deem ad-

The most prominent member of the committee was Casey, himself the real culprit. After a perfunctory search through quarters occupied by other cadets, they reached Mr. Boyd's and found nothing to reward their efforts. At that juncture Casey glanced upward at a pile of books ly-ing on some shelves and said, "Let us look at that large dictionary."

Casey's room was directly opposite that occupied by Mr. Boyd, who roomed alone because of his unpopularity. Mr. Boyd's room was unguarded and accessible, so no doubt Casey had frequently entered it and taken money from the man he now publicly accused. The search took place at noon, when the main body of the corps were at dinner. On Mr. Boyd's return to his room he found it filled with cadets, who madly accused him of the crime. White with horror and shame unspeakable, he answered their charges in a way which would have convinced any judge of human nature that he was entirely innocent. Sinking to his knees and raising his eyes to heaven, he cried, "By the memory of my dead mother, I swear I knew nothing whatever of this money." But the supposed culprit was in the hands of Philistines. No thought of mercy impelled them. I now quote from a published account by an eyewitness the scene later in the day: "It was a cold, sad, blusterless day. The air was full of snow, and the cold was bitter. Orders were given to fall into ranks in the area of the barracks for undress parade. The cadet adjutant commanded, 'Parade rest.' After a pause he continued, 'Cadet captains will place themselves opposite their respective company fronts and arrest any man who leaves the ranks.' There was an interval the wind's howling came the sound of tramping feet. "Across the broad porch of the barracks and down the steps came four cadets, bearing between them a man's form. They advanced along the battalion's front. As they turned the adjutant raised his right hand, and forthwith the drums and fifes beat and wailed out in unmelodious and unearthly harmony the terrible tune of the 'Rogues' March.' On they came, and now I saw affixed to that man's breast a der, at 2:30 p. m., on the premises, large white placard, and on it the words, that certain tract of land lying on 'Coward!' 'Liar!' 'Thief!' The face above the Ardery Turnpike within one mile of the words was marble white, as the face of Millersburg, the property of I. R. Best, the dead, but the wild, staring, blood red and particularly described as follows: eyes seemed to wail and shrink in their horrible misery. The four cadets passed along the full length of the battalion, and with their victim turned down the slope beyond the buildings and disappeared."
